The Palliser 75 Years A Calgary Classic

Before the arrival of the Canadian Pacific Railway in 1883, Calgary was little more than a Mounted Police post and trading centre. The city was primarily populated by ranchers and pioneers at the time, and had a deserved reputation as 'the wild west of Canada'. When the railway was completed, however, there was a huge influx of people into the area — travellers and businessmen alike — and it quickly became evident that there was a need for 'refined' establishments to accommodate the wealthy tourists.

The city thrived over the following years, and with the onset of the pre-war real estate boom, it became clear that second-rate service would no longer suffice. Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, President of the CPR at the time, noted that Calgary still lacked a 'grand hotel' to accommodate wealthy travellers and dignitaries, and resolved to do something about it. Construction of his 'grand' vision began on May 12, 1911, and in June of 1914 the 'Castle by the Tracks' was officially opened under the name of 'Hotel Palliser'.

Named in honour of the explorer Captain John Palliser, The Palliser was a veritable oasis of luxury and comfort in the midst of the prairies. Marble floors, oak panelling, candelbra lighting, and handmade rugs were just a few of the lavish appointments that set The Palliser apart from any hotel between Vancouver and Winnipeg. In addition to being the hotel of choice among travellers, it also quickly became the social hub of Calgary.

Though the "Great War" interrupted the success of The Palliser's opening season, the hotel responded to the needs of the community and offered 50 cent meals to volunteers in its main dining room, and its bar room for use as headquarters for the local Victory Loan Committee. Shortly after the war ended and the Roaring Twenties began, The Palliser came into its own as the centre of social, intellectual, and business life within the city, and it has remained so every since.

The hotel has been extensively refurbished over the decades in order to retain its luxurious, regal ambiance. During its history it has been the favoured choice of Queens, Dukes, political leaders, entertainers, and was most recently honoured when it was chosen the Host Hotel for the 1988 Olympic Winter Games.

The height of luxury in Calgary for over 75 years, The Palliser is truly a diamond in the rough of the 'Wild West'.

STAN WILSON, NANTON, ALBERTA

Stan's early years as a child were spent in Ontario where he received his education and assisted his family in the livestock producing business. In the early 1940's he came West on the Harvest Excursions and was so enthralled with Alberta, he decided to stay. Stan settled in the Nanton area in 1946 and began working on the large A7 ranch. By 1947, this Eastern-born cowboy was made Foreman.

It was in 1950 that Stan and his Bride set out to start their own ranch in the rolling Foothills, South and West of Nanton. Today, they are operating it with their three sons and their daughter.

In the early 1960's, Government policies affecting the use of land prompted Stan to become involved in the Advisory Council for Improvement District #6. His involvement lasted 19 years. From this, Stan joined the Cattlemen's Association and in 1980 was elected Chairman of the Alberta Cattle Commission, a position which he held for two years. During this time, Stan also served as a Director on the Board of the Canadian Cattlemen's Association and was elected President of the national organization for 1986-1988. Stan is still a member of the Executive and currently serves as well on other committees.

Stan's experiences in dealing with national, international and local matters affecting the Beef Industry have given him a great appreciation for the people who make it up.

Indeed, Stan Wilson is a Real Live Rangeman.
